

was only in the saloon of Gilliland's during the winter months. When he visited the place he simply went into the bar-room. He knew that there were girls around but did not recall any of their names excepting that there were two Stewart girls, one of whom was the housekeeper. He did not recall Anna King or any of the various names I mentioned, nor did he ever remember having seen the person whose picture I showed him. I further questioned him as to whether he had ever run across her with any of the circuses. He said he had not. Further William Gambel was bartender at the roadhouse for a number of years, but he is now dead.

He says that there were five Gilliland boys, namely, Bob, Dan, Sam, Ed and John, in addition to James, who conducted the road house. All of them are dead with the exception of John, who is a salesman in New York City. He does not know with what concern John is connected, but says that he would not know anything about conditions at the road house as he never came to New Brunswick, except to attend a funeral.

The only other person who he could recall who might know something about the place was Daniel Maloney. He thinks that Maloney and his wife at present are caretakers of one of the fraternity houses at Rutgers College. I will endeavor to locate him.

John Mooney to whom I have referred before told me that I could probably get more information concerning Gilliland's place from Tom Revelinsky and his cousin or brother-in-law, Pete Reulewich, than from any other persons around New Brunswick. That Revelinsky's mother had conducted a store next to the road house for a number of years and Tom had been brought up in the neighborhood. I spoke to Mr. Watson and he endeavored to make an appointment for us to meet these two men with their attorney, Thomas Haggerty. Mr. Haggerty was going out of town for the evening so the appointment will be made for the fore part of next week.

I communicated with Jack Manley of the New Brunswick Police Department. He said that his brother Bill was somewhere in Newark but he did not have his address. He advised me to get in touch with his brother Thomas or Bob at Franklin Park, N.J. I 'phoned Bob. He said that he did not have the address but that if I were to visit the saloons around the corner of South Orange Avenue and Bergen Street, Newark, I would have no trouble locating him as he was well known in that neighborhood.

There is a man named Coulton Duff conducting a saloon somewhere in Newark, N.J. He formerly was at New Brunswick and I am informed that he would know where Bill Manley lives if we can locate the saloon.

The telephone directory lists a William H. Manley at 10 Irvington Avenue, Newark, N.J., phone Terrace 6234. This man has lived in Newark all his life and is not the William H. (Bill) Manley we desire to interview.

Respectfully yours,
